

New Baby In the House

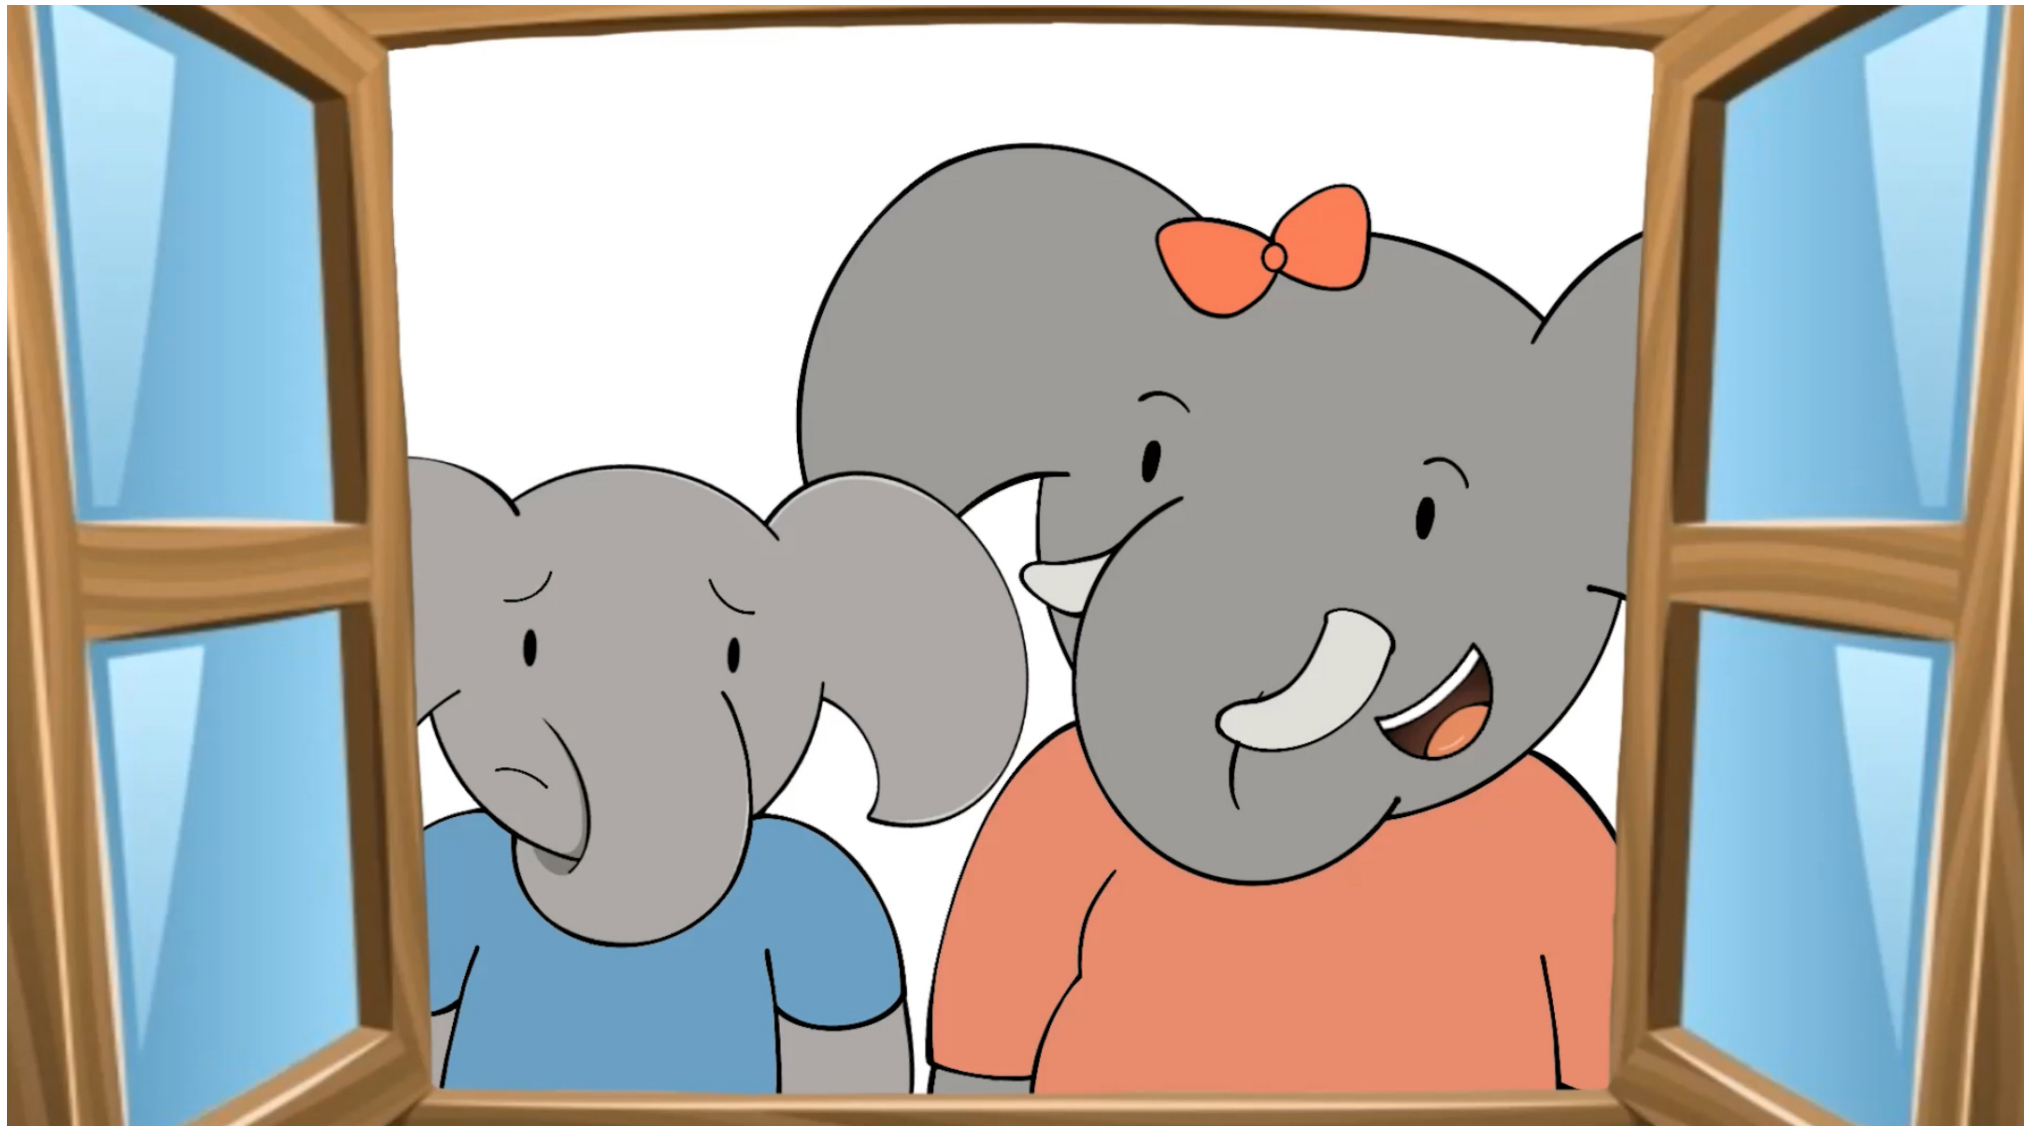

From Autism Behavior Services, Inc.

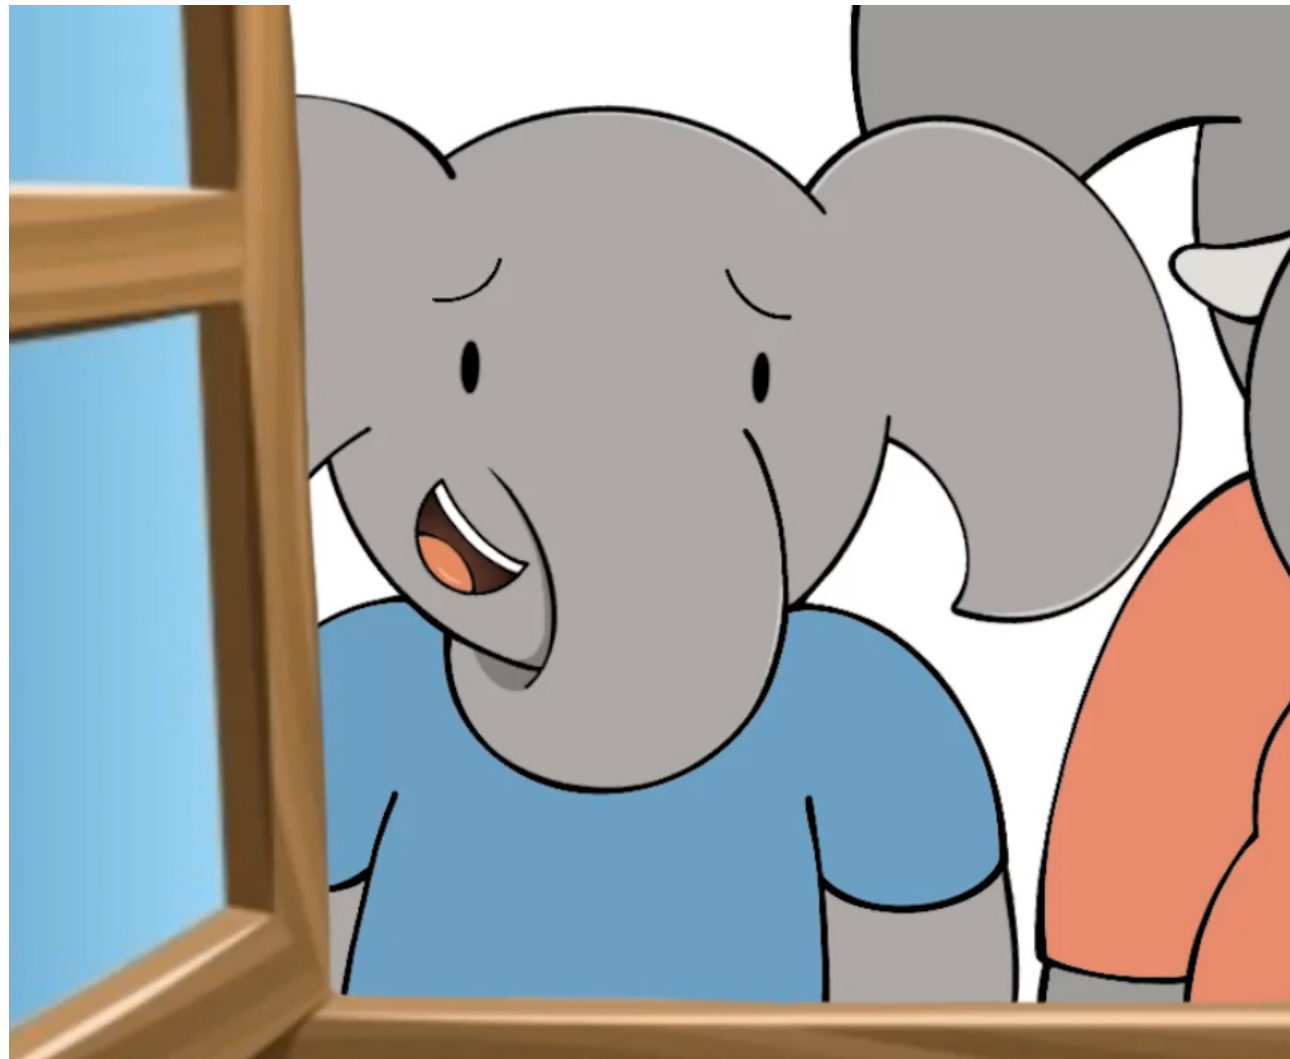

Rowan is sad

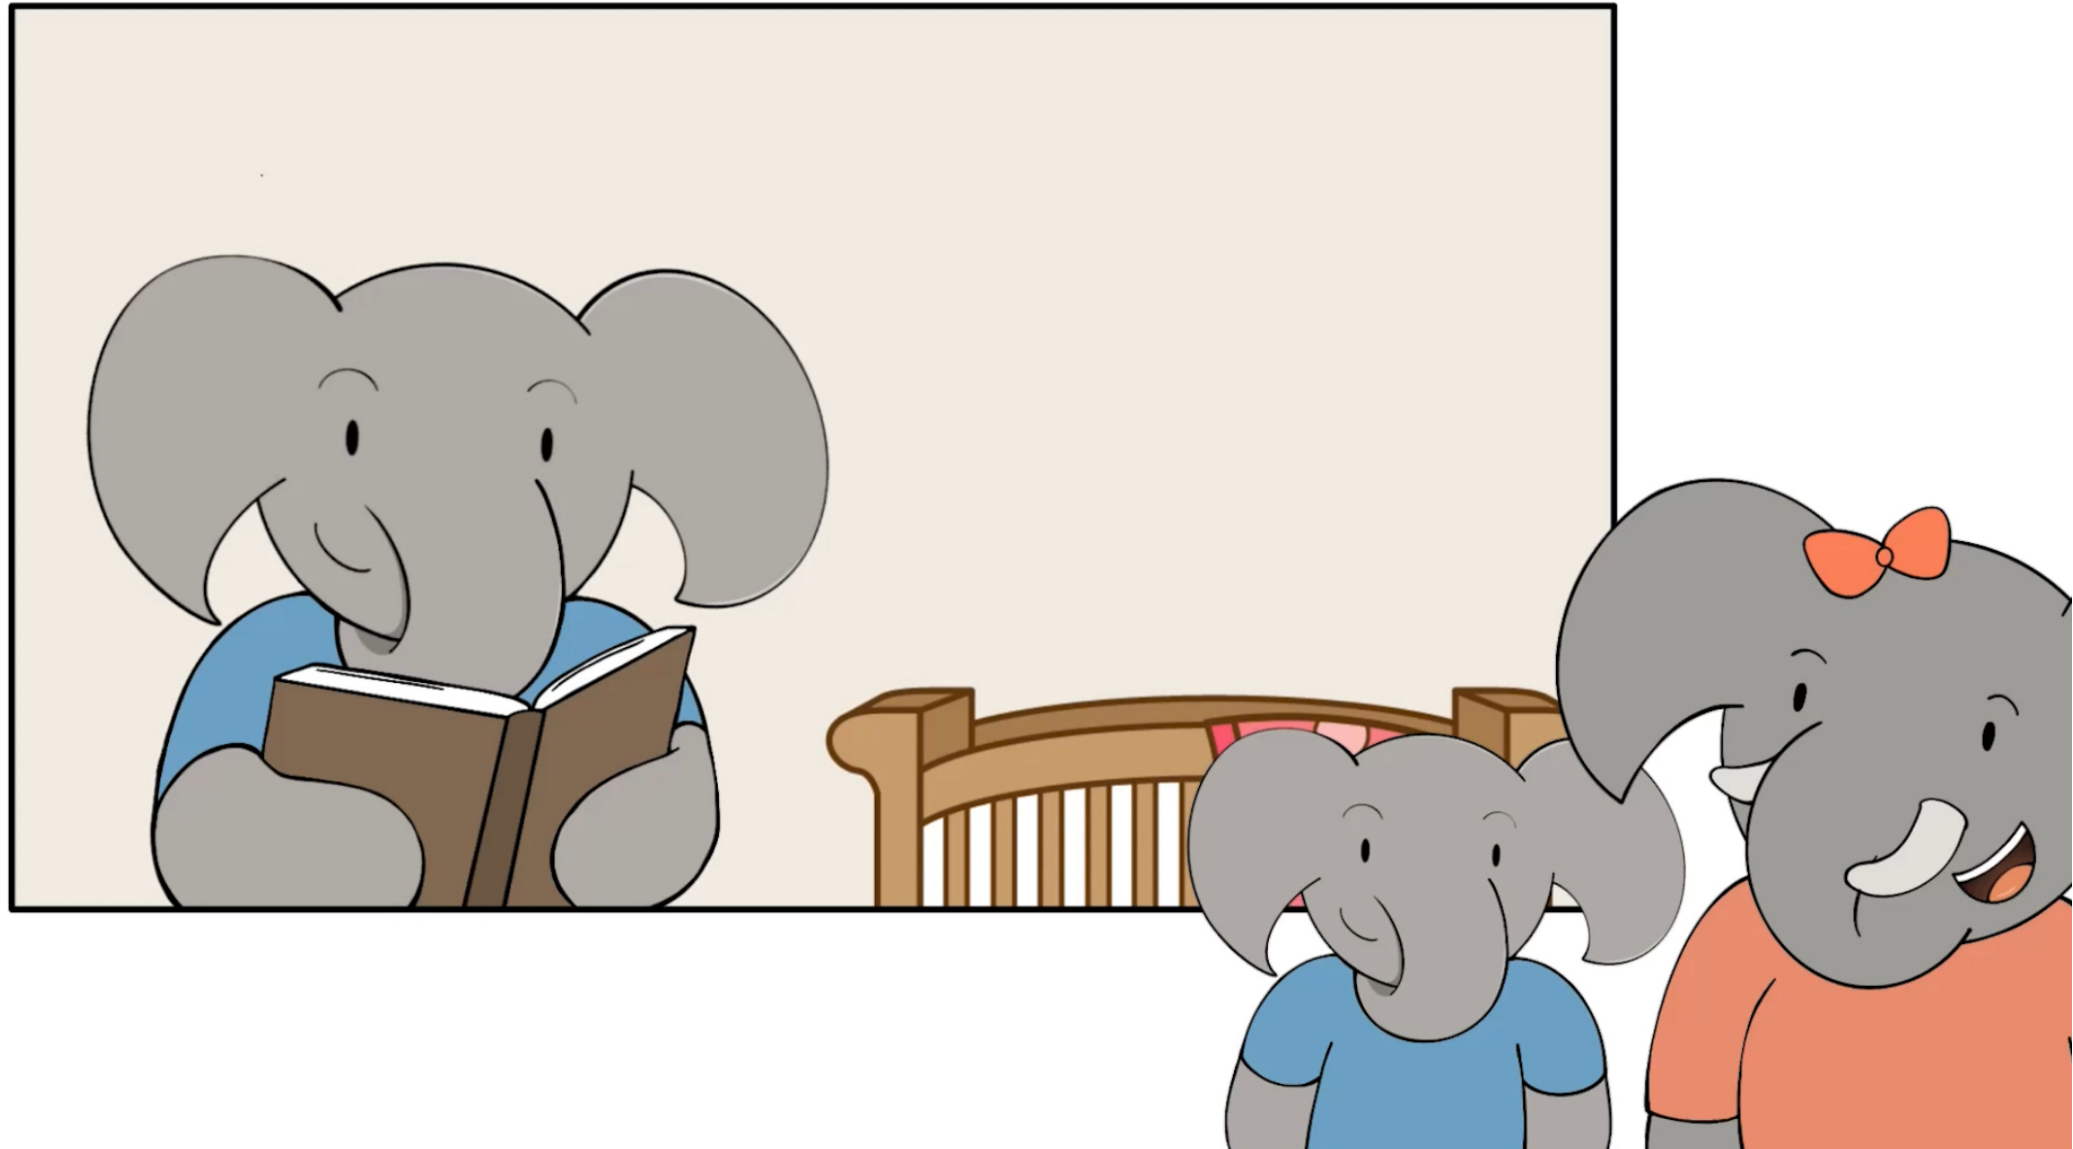

He's going to be a big brother and he doesn't want to be. He thinks everything in his life will change.

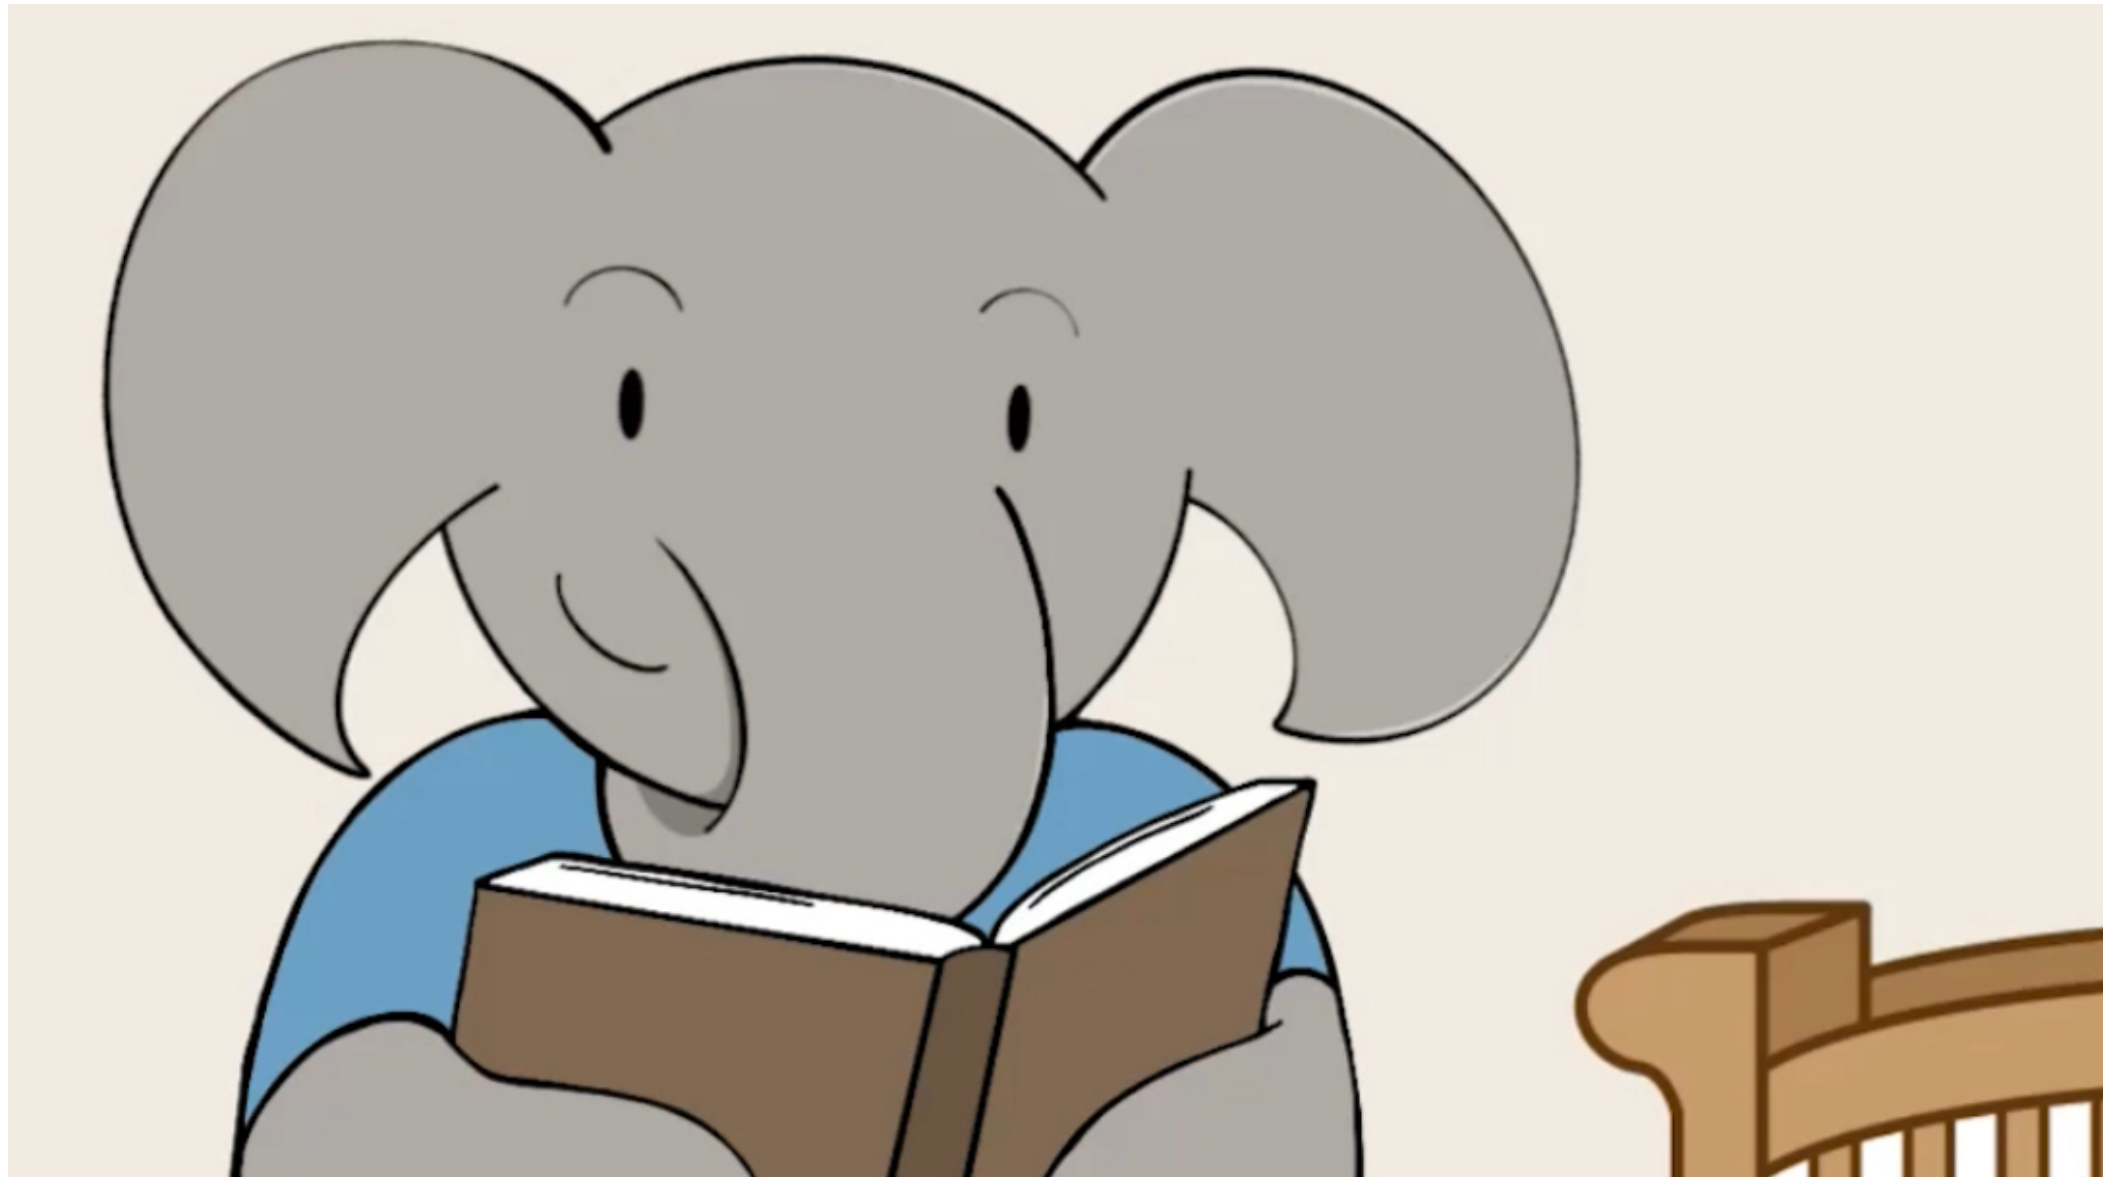

His Mom tells him that things will change but they will also be better too.

“How?” Rowan asks.

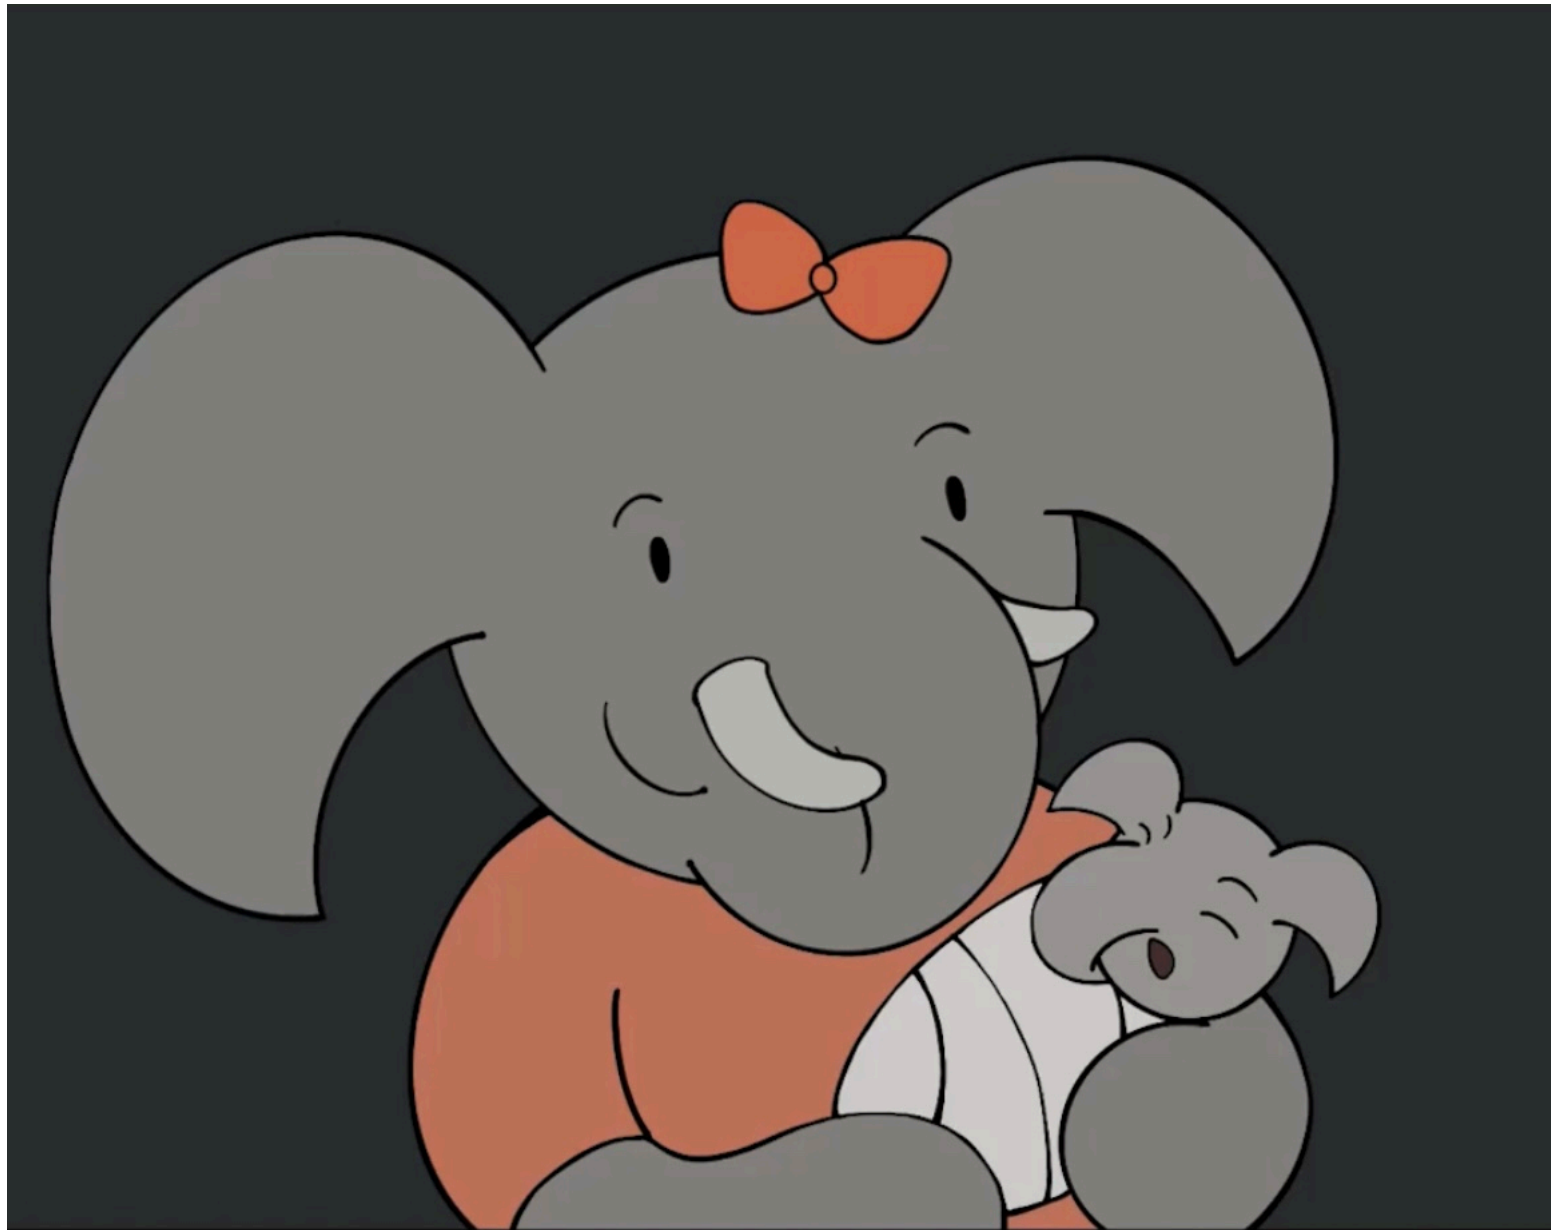

His Mom tells him his role is going to change.
Rowan can help his parents now!

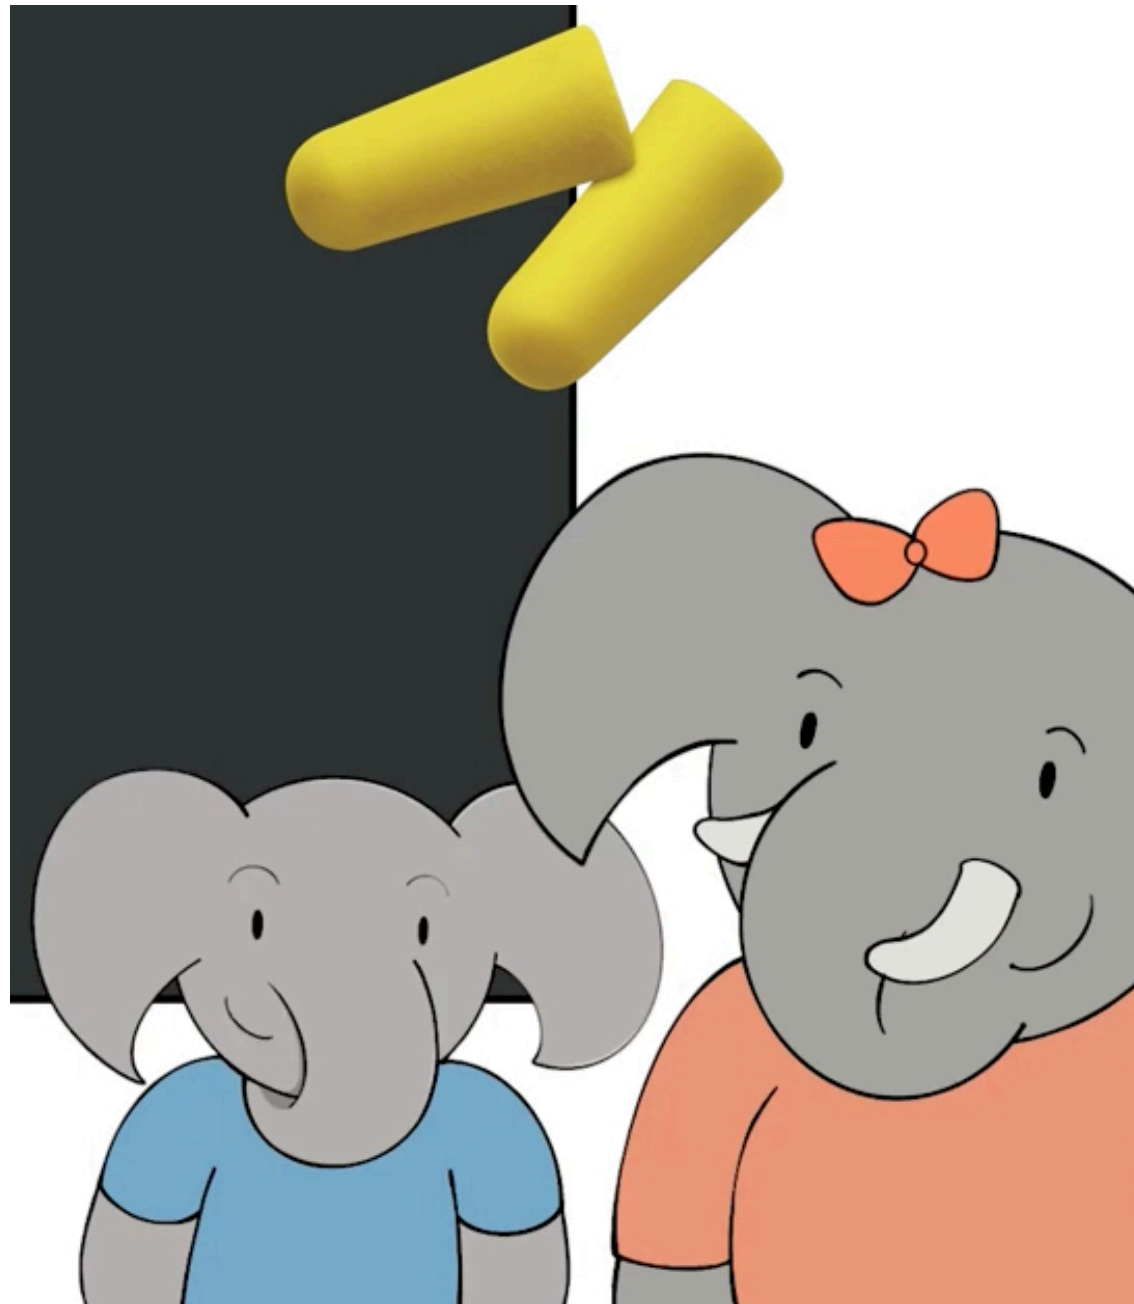

“You can read to her,” his Mom says. “And eventually teach her how to play video games if she wants to learn.”

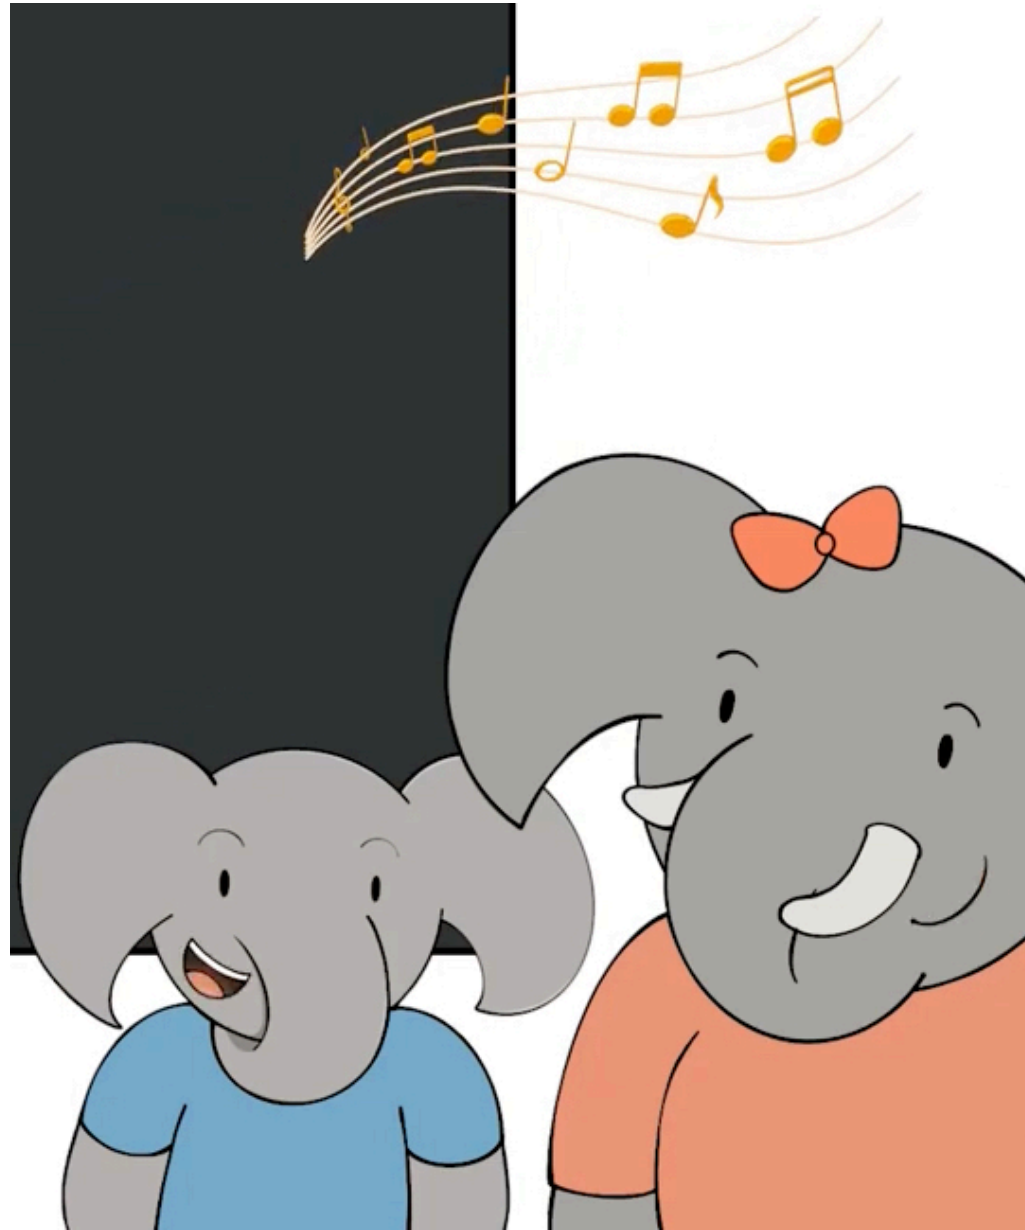

“What about when she cries?” Rowan asks.
“That’s going to be really loud and bother everyone.”

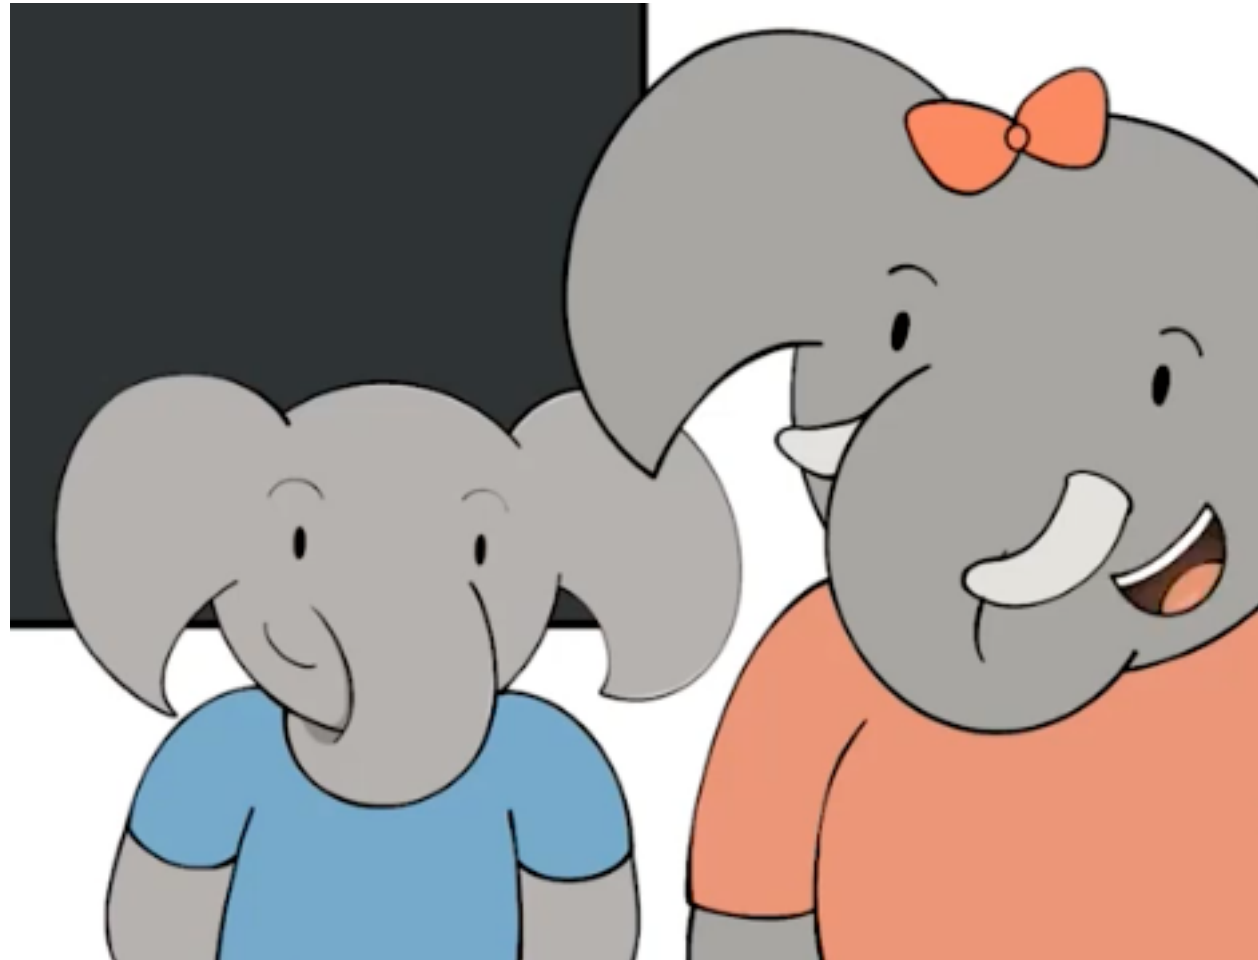

His mom explains that that's how babies communicate. Then she asks Rowan how he can help when the baby cries?

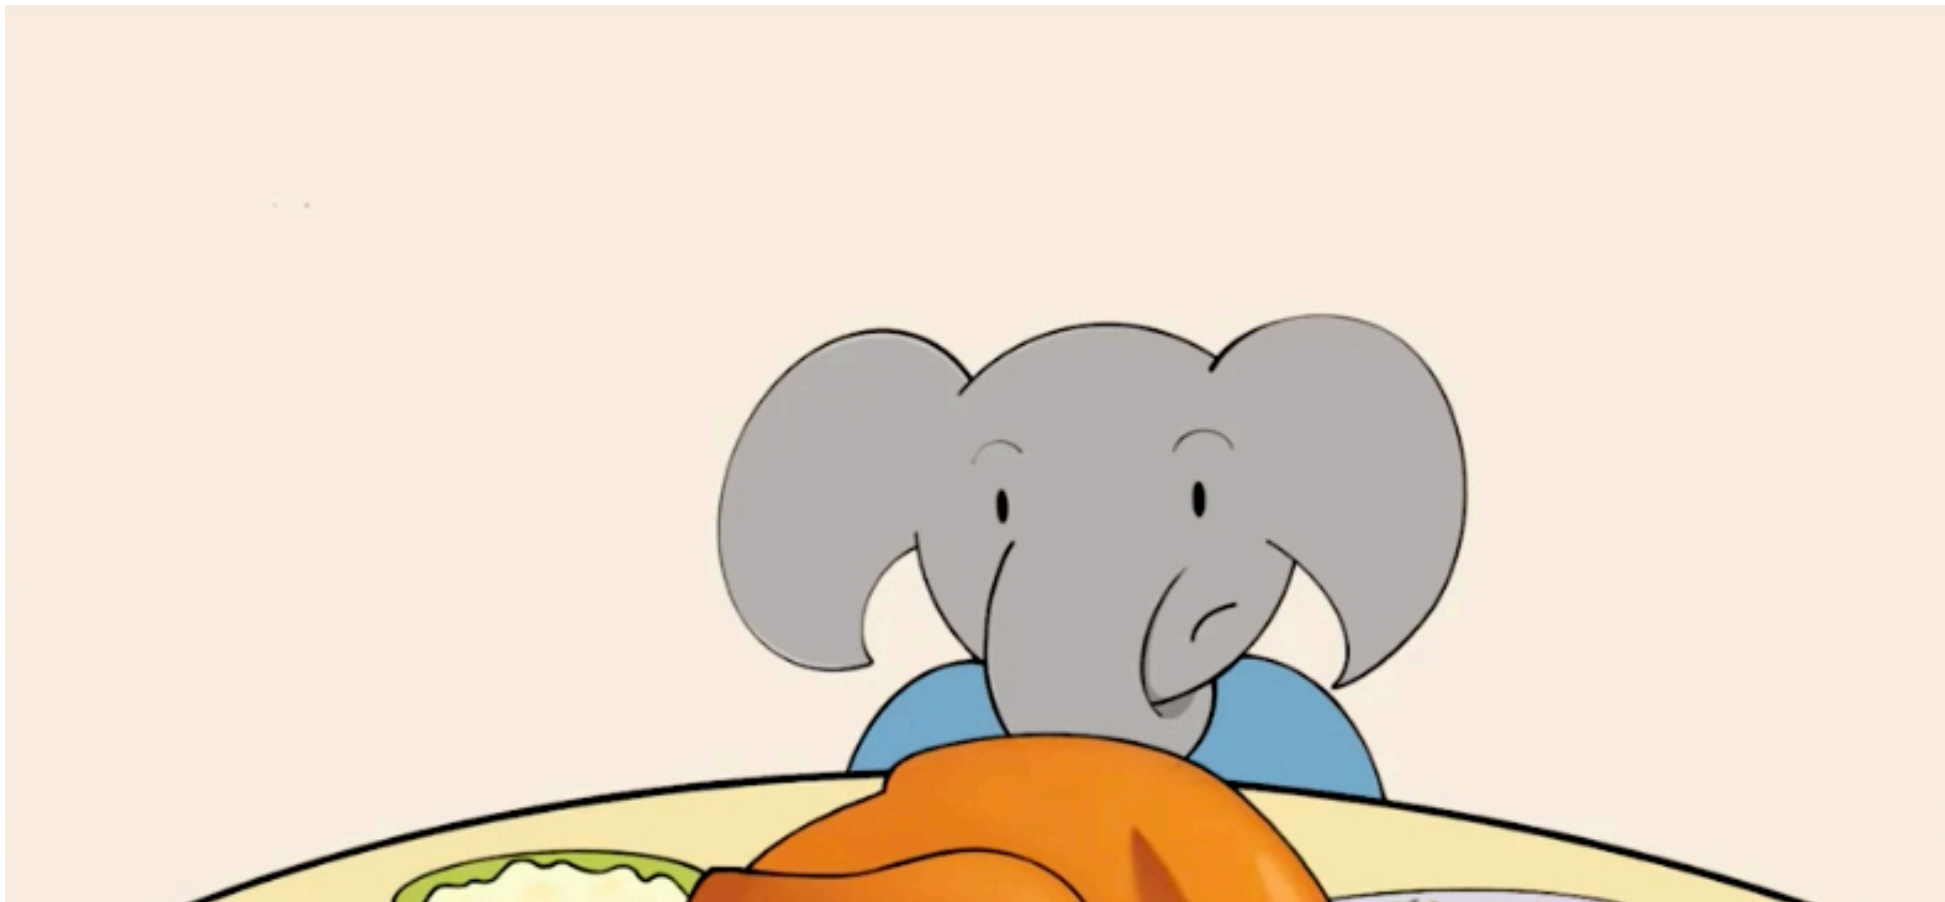

Rowan says he can wear earplugs.

He says he can listen to his music with headphones.

Rowan's Mom says the best thing he can do is let his parents handle things. That will make his sister crying easier for everyone.

Rowan's baby sister might need more attention.
Sadly, there are times Rowan might find himself alone.

Rowan's Mom assures him this won't last forever. She also tells him he might enjoy being a little more independent.

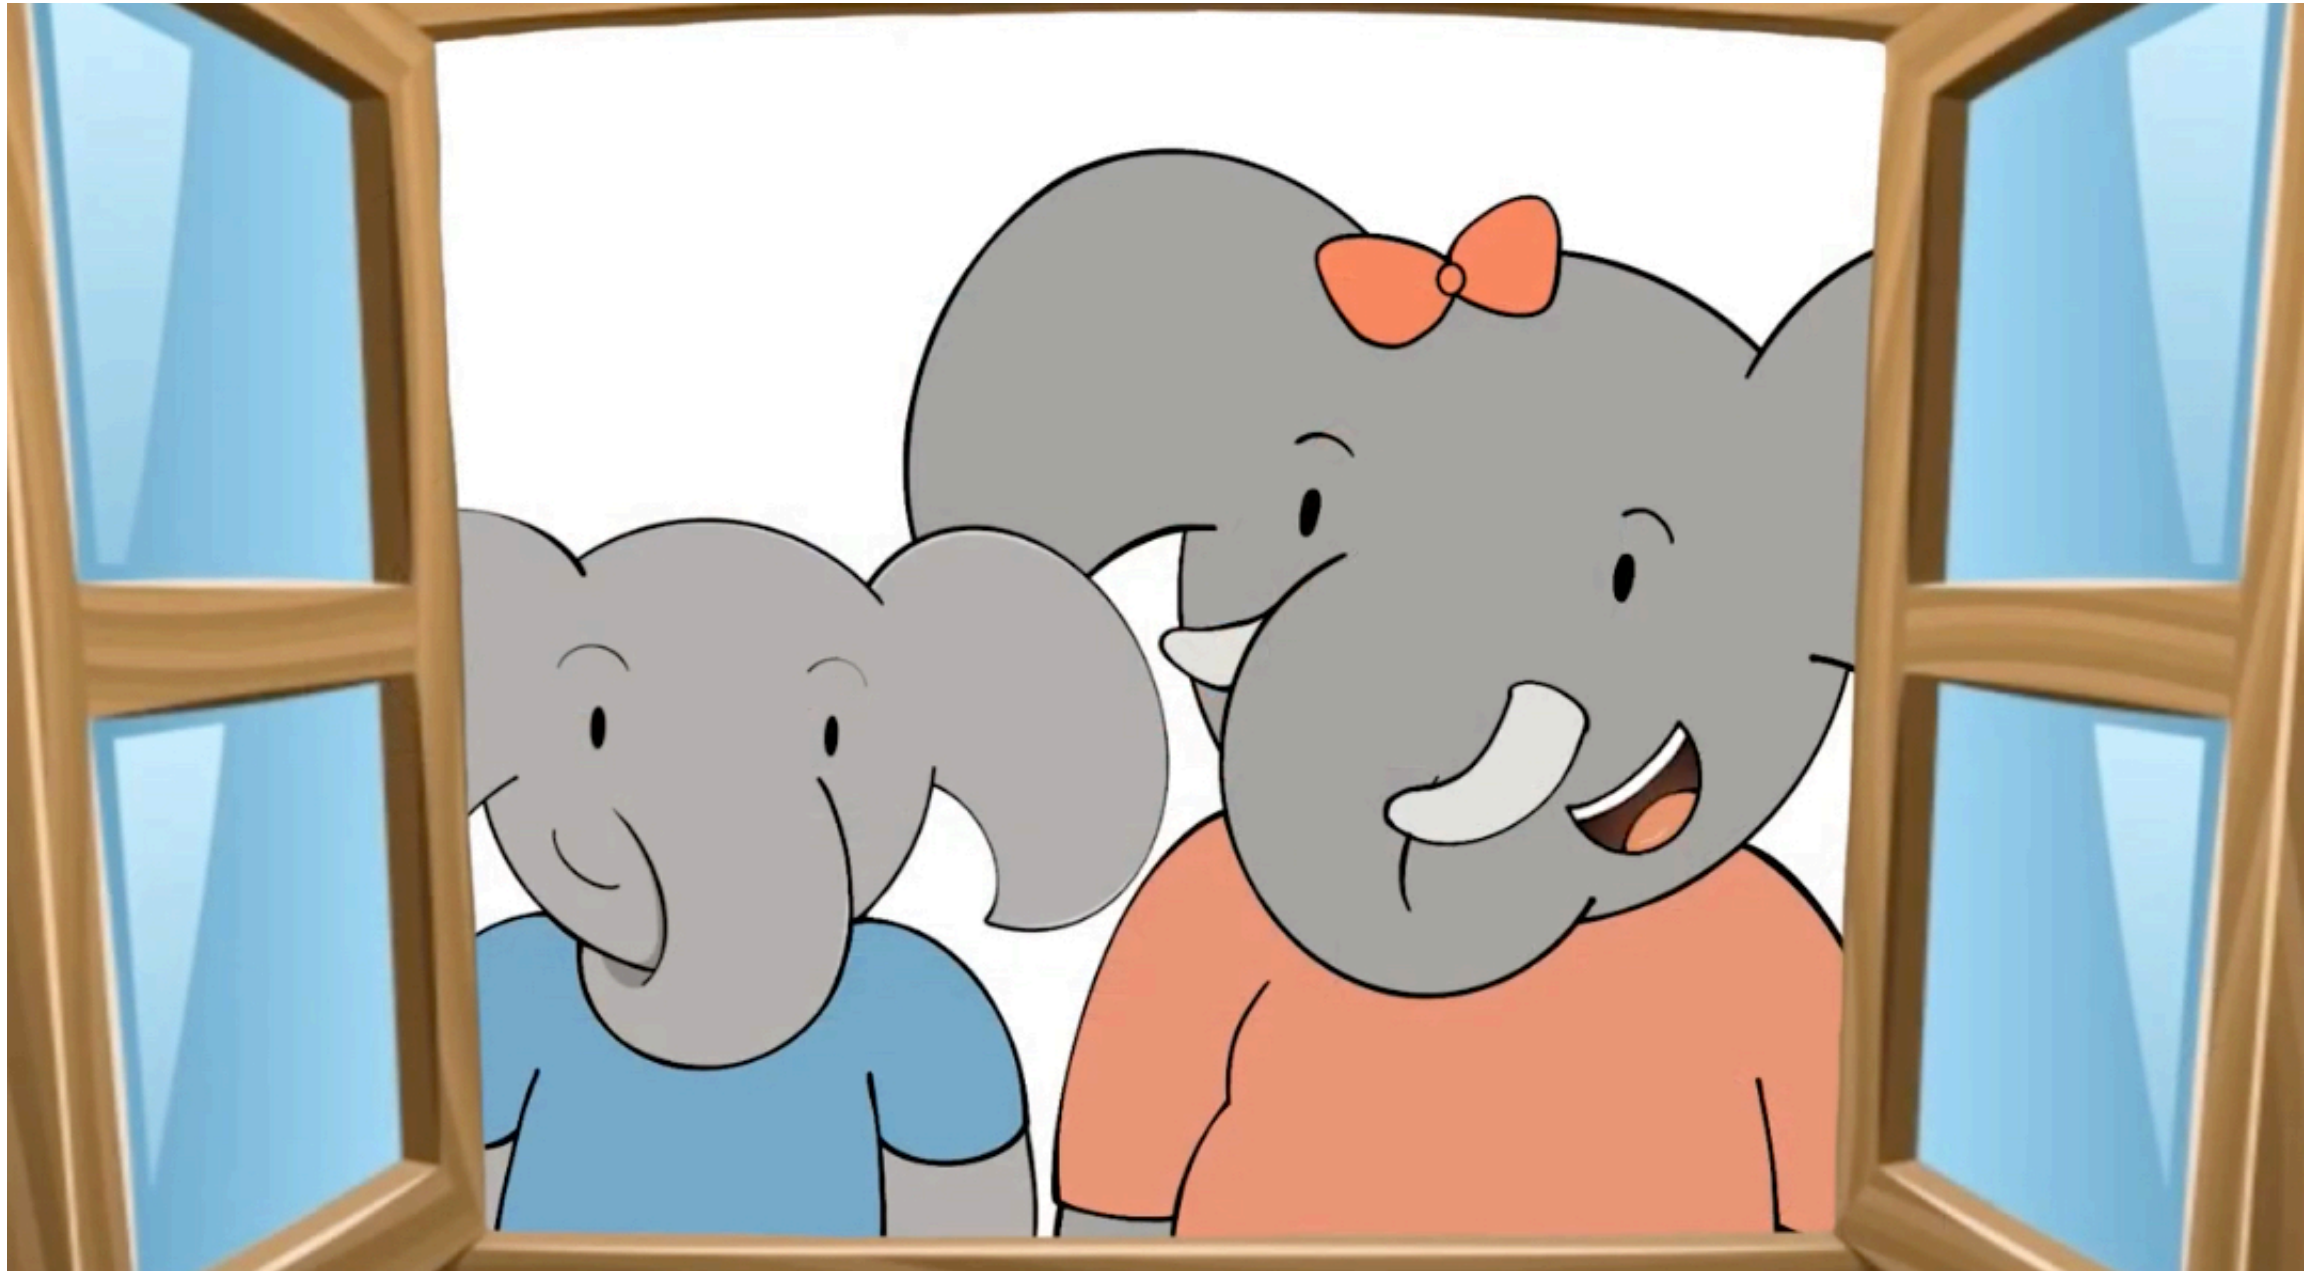

She also tells him that his Mom and Dad, even though they are busier, still love him just as much as ever.

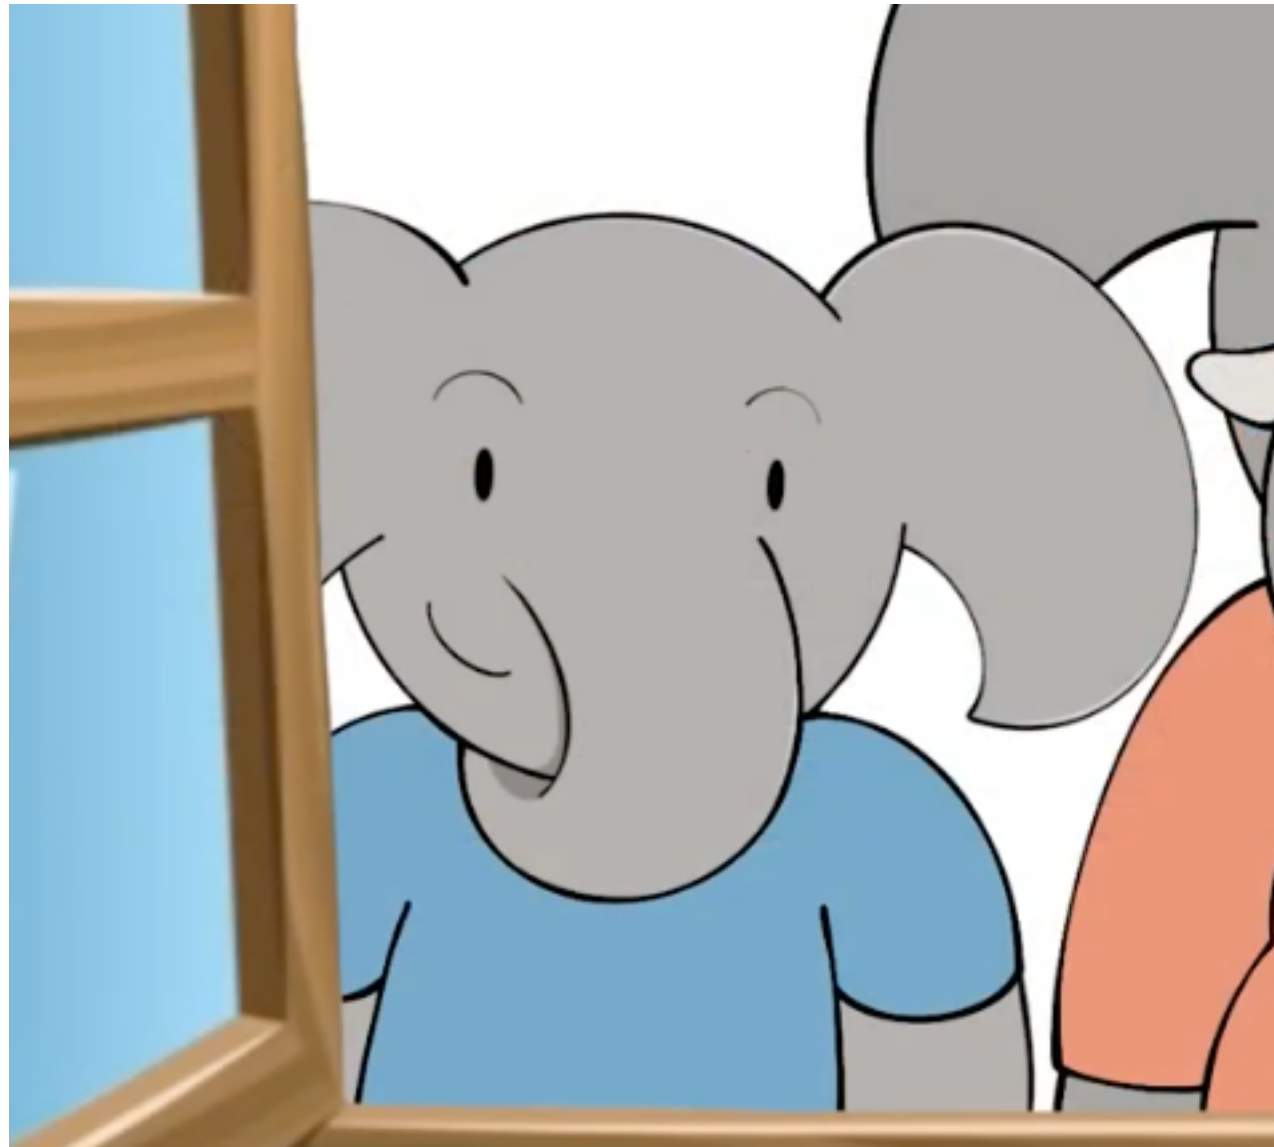

Rowan realizes that when his sister is sad, he can do funny things...

This will make her happy again!

Rowan's Mom is happy to see that he's looking forward to being a big brother now.

And Rowan is excited to be a friend, teacher, and helper to his Baby sister.

For More Resources and Information please visit:

www.autismbehaviorservices.com

For More Information on Autism or Careers in Autism please contact:

1-855-581-0100

